

Wind Warriors

We are whistleblowers. Power can corrupt – whether it is on the left or the right – and abuse of power must be confronted. While we may not agree on a common political philosophy we do agree on some common standards:

- Honesty
- A love of natural beauty
- The importance of caring for our environment
- The importance of intellectual curiosity and the seeking of a better way to do things.
- The importance of speaking out for what we believe to be true
- A respect for each other
- Open discussion of energy issues
- Recognition that it is sometimes necessary to separate ideas from ideology and support the policy that works best in a situation.

We will bring more to the table when we can be for something rather than against something because we then are bringing our positive values into the debate.

For instance, instead of calling the media biased we can ask that the media report a broader range of viewpoints. Instead of blaming legislators, corporations, landowners etc. we can take the responsibility for presenting our views forcefully – but also respectfully.

As people who live with and appreciate beauty, we can bring the centeredness that such appreciation gives us into public life because the natural beauty which brings centeredness is what we are fighting for.

We are fortunate to be living in a country where we will not be killed for standing up for our beliefs.

We are fortunate to have each other for support.

And we are fortunate to be living in a time when the internet makes our group possible.
